AUTHORITY

The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (P.L. 104-13) provides the authority for the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to develop, coordinate, and oversee statistical activities, along with the privacy, confidentiality, security, disclosure, and sharing of information (44 U.S.C. 3504(a)), and to appoint the Chief Statistician of the United States (CSOTUS) and establish the Interagency Council on Statistical Policy (ICSP) to advise and assist the Director to carry out statistical policy (44 U.S.C. 3504(e)). The Council was expanded under the Foundations for Evidence-Based Policy Making Act of 2018 (P.L. 115-435) to include each Statistical Official designated under the Act.

According to the authorizing statutes, the ICSP was established to assist and advise OMB in carrying out their statutory responsibility to coordinate the Federal statistical system to ensure its efficiency and effectiveness, as well as the objectivity, impartiality, utility, and confidentiality of information collected for statistical purposes. Examples of OMB responsibilities include:

- Developing, maintaining, and overseeing statistical policies, standards, and guidelines.
- Identifying and implementing priorities for improving statistical programs and methodologies.
- Assessing statistical agency, unit, and program budgets to ensure they are consistent with system-wide priorities for maintaining and improving the quality of Federal statistics.
- Coordinating the United States participation in international statistical activities, among other functions.

VISION (SCOPE)

The Council is intended to help the United States Federal statistical system operate as a seamless system, working together to provide strategic vision and robust implementation in support of the Federal statistical system's critical longstanding —and expanding— role for supporting evidence-informed decision-making. For example, the ICSP sets strategic goals for modernizing the statistical system, ensuring data quality and confidentiality, and providing safe and appropriate data access, as well as enhancing coordination and collaboration across the system.

OBJECTIVES (GOALS)

The Council shall perform functions that include the following:

- Develop recommendations for, and assist OMB in, drafting new guidance and carrying out their statutory responsibility to coordinate the Federal statistical system.
- Inform/support development of government-wide priorities and monitor their implementation.
- Share lessons learned, ideas, best practices, and innovative approaches.
- Lead in the identification, development, and coordination of projects and innovative initiatives.
- Promote collaboration and community building to address shared challenges, while minimizing duplication.
- Engage in dialogue with other Councils and key groups in the Federal Government on matters of concern to the Council.
- Support OMB in its role as the United States representative to international statistical bodies.

REPRESENTATIVES FROM OTHER COUNCILS OR GROUPS

The ICSP may invite representatives from other councils or groups to participate in the meetings or activities of the Council, to include relevant subcommittees/working groups. These representatives will be designated by that Council, following an invitation of participation from the ICSP, through consultation with the ICSP Chair. These representatives are not members of the ICSP.

RELATIONSHIPS WITH OTHER COUNCILS OR GROUPS

The ICSP may nominate members to serve on related councils and other governmental policy and standards bodies, for example the Chief Data Officer Council (CDOC), the Evaluation Officer Council (EOC), the Federal Committee on Statistical Methodology (FCSM), and the Federal Geographic Data Committee (FGDC). Any nominations must be approved by a vote of the ICSP (see Voting).

The Council may exchange information and perspectives with these Councils and other governmental policy and standards bodies.

In particular, the ICSP maintains a close relationship with the FCSM to advance policy priorities and statistical methodologies for the Federal statistical system. The FCSM is an interagency committee founded by OMB to assist in carrying out OMB's role in setting and coordinating statistical policy. Among other mission responsibilities, the FCSM informs and advises OMB and the ICSP on methodological and statistical issues that affect the accuracy, objectivity, relevance, and confidentiality of Federal statistical data. The ICSP provides input to the FCSM on policy priorities to inform FCSM focus areas; and in turn, the FCSM serves as a resource to OMB and the ICSP to inform decision-making on matters of statistical policy and to provide technical assistance and guidance on statistical and methodological issues.

STRUCTURES AND PROCEDURES

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The Executive Committee, chaired by the Chair of the ICSP or an authorized delegate, is responsible for drafting Council priorities and other recommended courses of action for ICSP consideration, and overseeing the work of the Council and its subcommittees/working groups to ensure alignment between Council work and Federal statistical system priorities.

MEMBERS

The Executive Committee shall consist of six to eight ICSP members who, collectively bring one or more of the following, with the goal of achieving a committee that collectively brings diverse outlooks, experiences, and perspectives:

COUNCIL BODY STRUCTURE AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The ICSP consists of the full council, the Executive Committee, and may have one or more subcommittees or working groups, communities of practice, and other permanent or temporary bodies. A listing of these bodies is maintained separate from the charter, since the formation and dissolution of such groups is at the recommendation and a vote of the ICSP.

- All bodies should have charters or project plans, to establish core goals and practices, especially for those in a permanent stature.
 - The charter or project plan should include: a clearly defined scope, measurable goals and outcomes, and clear deadlines for deliverables, as appropriate.
 - When an initiative accomplishes its objectives, then it will be dissolved, unless otherwise indicated as a permanent body.
- All are responsible to the ICSP and will keep the Council apprised of their activities and progress in accomplishing their goals, including quarterly updates (at a minimum) based on the documented project plan.

COUNCIL BODY MEMBERSHIP

Unless otherwise designated in the given subcommittee/working group/other body charter, membership shall be defined by the following specifications:

- Membership shall be determined by members of the ICSP, including the participation of members of their agencies.
- These will be chaired or co-chaired by an ICSP member, or led by other individuals as the ICSP may designate.
 - If a body is not chaired/co-chaired by an ICSP member, it will at minimum have an Executive Champion from the ICSP to provide ICSP strategic guidance and support.

qualifying criteria for participation in the initiative. These additional members do not become members of the ICSP and will be approved by the ICSP.

SUBCOMMITTEES

Subcommittees examine, execute, and/or oversee continuing or recurring matters related to Council priorities. These subcommittees also identify issues suitable for review by the Council, gather and evaluate information, and recommend courses of action for the Council.

Subcommittees cover a wide range of subject areas and thus may need working groups to manage sub-efforts.

WORKING GROUPS

Working Groups are a subdivision of a subcommittee that is organized around a specific issue or related set of issues, considering specified matters, and reporting back to the full subcommittee. These working groups may be permanent or temporary and are responsible to and work within the guidelines established by their parent subcommittee.

COMMUNITIES OF PRACTICE

Communities of Practice (CoP) are informal groups with shared interests, skills, or practices that focus on or promote a priority of the Council or specific topic supported by the Council. Any member of the ICSP may propose the establishment of a new CoP, with establishment after ICSP concurrence. The primary objectives of a CoP are to:

- Facilitate and provide a forum for communication and coordination on specific topics and issues.
- Serve as a resource for a specific sub-community within the statistical system.
- Evaluate the education, training, and professional development needs of members of a specific sub-community and provide input to the Council on such matters.
- Host discussions or events with a focus on issues of interest to the CoP.
- Bring issues to the Council for consideration that are relevant to their areas of interest or expertise.

A quorum shall be established by members present at a duly scheduled meeting with appropriate notice given to members of the Council. The outcome votes will be determined by a supermajority (i.e., a two-thirds majority vote). The Chair of the Council will only vote in the case of a tie and shall break the tie vote. Ex officio members and representatives from other Councils or groups, who are not members of the Council, are invited to contribute their skills and expertise to projects and initiatives, but do not have a vote.
